The sense of abundance in love, in freedom, in time spent with another human, is nothing short of out of this world. I built this song from that place: in reality, we have everything.

During our time together, I won't count my days. As long as we're together, this feeling is way too nice for me to leave.

I played this song around my lover and she loved it. To be honest, it made me love. And the pictures in this book remind us of how we met: in a daladala.

When you finally experience the love that needs no explaining yourself, no dimming your own light, only complete peace, you'll hear this song differently.

FIND THE LOVE THAT NEVER ASKS YOU TO DIM. THEN STOP COUNTING THE DAYS.
